Invitation to Te Pūkenga employer briefing

Te Pūkenga is a new organisation that will bring together the 16 polytechnics and the arranging training functions from many of the industry training organisations into one new national network from January 2023. The way we deliver vocational education in New Zealand is changing to better support our future workforce and employers.

I will be running a series of online briefings on our proposed Operating Model to share how Te Pūkenga will deliver its services to create the right future experiences and outcomes for learners and employers.

Why should you get involved?

Te Pūkenga is at a critical period of developing its future Operating Model. As an employer your feedback is critical to this process and we welcome your thoughts.

What will you see and do?

I will take you through the proposed Operating Model, how it supports the reforms of vocational education and how the views of employers/industry are incorporated. You will be provided with links to a website where you can provide feedback until Monday 1 November.

What difference will I make?

Your contributions will improve the Operating Model and help with its detailed design.
